THE GAZETTE.

SATURDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 6, 1858 BUSINESS UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

A correspondent of the Times writer: "A traveller who had passed with a guide safely through the Breche de Roland, in the Pyrenees, suddenly conceived the idea of clambering an adjoining peak, simply because he was tord that every one who had yet attempted it had paid the forfeit of his life. The more the guide endeavored to dissuade him, the more firmly be resolved to accomplish the task or perish. He had already achieved a third of the ascent of this almost perpendicular crag, overbanging a rocky gorge two thousand feet below, when, to his surprise, he heard the sound of hard breathing just behind. Looking over his shoulder, he beheld a stranger clinging by his bands and feet, and yet toiling steadily and manfully up the same fearful path. 'Ah!' exclaimed he, 'you come to share with me the glory of this undertaking?" 'Not a notion of the sort.' 'You want, then, doubtless, to erjoy the sublimity of the prospect from he tot?' 'Nothing to ther from my inter lon.' 'Are you aware that every step is at the hazard of your life!''Undoubtedly.' 'Then let me ask, what on earth, can bring a sane man on such an errand?' 'I have an object.' The Englishman smiled; both set to work again resolutely digging their nails into the granite clefts. At last, finding themselves on a plateau a few feet square, covered with ice, they halted for a few moments, when the stranger, raising his hat, respectfully observed, 'You can hardly deny, sir, that you are at every step encountering great risk, nor can you, I think, under the circumstances, fail to admit the value of my wares.' 'You have, at least chosen,' said the Englishman, 'an extraordinary spot for disposing of them, with the clouds a thousand feet beneath us, and the thermometer much below freezing.' 'Oa! not a word about that. I've got all we want at hand-wen, ink, and paper, and you can use my shoulder for a desk. I am an agent to the Company for Insurance against Accidental Death. Before you go higher let me entreat of you to think of your family, and to fill up this form.' The Englishman smiled at the oddity of the proceeding signed the form, gave a check for the premium, and was never beard of afterwards. The agent cautously descended, satisfied with his commission, and at baving zealously discharged his duty to bis employers." A LION ROASTED.

Mrs. Col. Somerset, in an account of her adventures in Kaffraria, relates the following

"A few minutes yet of intense suspense, and then the silence was broken by a terrific roar, exactly in the direction they had expected; this was answered by a still more terrible saw through a thin part of the hedge, an imfire glowed brighter, as if to show the dreadful animal to her view more distinctly. He stood firm with mate erect, blinking his eyes in the unusual light, and lashing his tail preparatory to a spring. Helen's fascinated gaze was still upon him, when a spear glanced in the light, then sank quivering in his neck. With a roar like thunder, he crouched, and concentrating his whole force, sprang over the hedge, and right into the middle of the fire, scattering its embers in every direction. Even as he came down in his bound, half a dezen spears were plunged in his side. Infuriated by pain and fright, the lion bounded on, then, roused to madness, turned to bay. But a strange scene was now to be enacted, a new and irresistible enemy had attacked him. The fire having caught hie dry shaggy mane, was rapidly encircling him in glowing flame. With a shout of triumph the Kaffirs welcomed their new ally, charging the foe again as he snapped, hall frantic, at the fismes, and again leaving their spears embedded in his carcase. This time be did not attempt to charge, but, throwing bimself down, rolled about in agony, breaking the spears, and thus increasing his pain. At My stock comprises as great a variety as can last he rose, and, uttering yells rather than he found in any other house, consisting of HARroars, sprang away into the jungle, leaving NESS, of all kinds, from the fine quill work a trail of fire and sparks behind; these the down to the dray, cart, and plow Harness-breeze soon fanned into flames, and finding TRUNKS, of every kind, fine SOLE LEATHtoo ready food in the long dry grass, they were shooting their forked tongues up, and extending rapidly or either side. The hon had noted like a fox with a firebrand at his tail, and our friends could trace the enemy's way, far off in the valley by the line of

THE COMET. MASTER Tow. "I say, Gran'ma, this a bad job about the comet!" Gran'ma. "Good gracious! What's the CAPITAL OVER $250,000,

AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING.
The charter of this Company offers more favorable advantages to the farmer and others, than any other company chartered in the State by insuring with or without a premium note-If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium in cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured sates oneeighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay: or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the insured saves nearly one half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the combination of

THE CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE This company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 16th of March, 1854, since which time over five thousand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over thirty thousand dollars have been paid for losses -Having trebled our business during the past year, we teel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering prospects of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe that by prodence caution and a rigid system of economy, the will establish for this Company a reputation for cheapness and safety, not surpassed by any Company in the U. States.

All differences in settlement of losses, may be determined by three disinterested arbitrators at the County where such loss happened to be mutually chosen by the insured and the Company. DIRECTORS: Christopher Neale,
